Numb. 152.

THE South-Carolina Gazette.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From Saturday, DECEMBER 18, to Friday, DECEMBER 24, 1736.

LONDON, Sept 11.

THE Fire which happen'd the 25th of laſt Month at Petersburg, has thrown that fair City into the greateſt Confuſion, and the Inhabitants into inexpreſſible Conſternation: It broke out about Noon in the Part of the Town where the principal Merchants, as well Natives as Foreigners, have their Warehouſes and Shops, and the Wind being high, all Help was vain, the Flames took head, baffled all Reſiſtance, and continued ſpreading till about Eight in the Evening. The entire Quarter occupy'd by the Merchants, conſiſting of 500 Dwelling and Warehouſes, was conſum'd, together with great Quantities of Cloths, Velvets, Silks, Stuffs, Linnen, and Spices. The Flames were ſo fierce that the People had much ado to eſcape with Safety to their Perſons, 1500 Houſes were burnt down, in other Parts of the City, ſeven fine Palaces belonging to the Officers of the Emperor's Court lie in Aſhes, as does that of the Perſian Ambaſſador, the Hotels where his Attendance were lodged, the Poſt Office, the Slaughter Houſe, and the Shambles, in which were great Quantities of Meat and Proviſions, the Czarina's Winter Palace, and the Admiralty-Office were ſaved by pulling down the contiguous Houſes, and by that Means preventing the Flames reaching them; but the magnificent triumphal Arch, which was rais'd when her Czarian Majeſty made her publick Entry into that City, is burnt to the Ground. Notwithſtanding the great Care that was taken, ſeveral Perſons periſhed in the Flames, amongſt which were 123 of the Preobrazenski Guards, who, in pulling down ſome Houſes, were buried in the Ruins: Another Party of Soldiers employed in Means to ſtop the Progreſs of the Flames met the ſame Fate. The poor Inhabitants thus deprived of their Habitations are plung'd into the greateſt Miſery; the Houſes which are left ſtanding will not contain half their Number, ſo that many have been forced to take Shelter under Tents, whilſt others lie expos'd to the Inclemencies of Weather in the Streets and publick Places. 'Twas remark'd, that during the Conflagration, the Fire broke out in ſeveral different Places, and in ſuch where the other Flames could not reach, ſo that the Misfortune is ſuppos'd to have happened by Incendiaries ——— 'Twas even reported when the Letters came away, that ſome of them had been diſcover'd and apprehended, and that ſuch a dreadful Puniſhment was deviſing for them as ſhould prove a Terror to future Attempts. The City now preſents ſo many terrible Proſpects, that her Czarian Majeſty, who is the tender Mother of her People, cannot bear the Sight of its Ruins, and has put off her Deſign of returning thither till it revives in new Buildings.

On the 31ſt of the ſame Month, likewiſe about Noon, a Fire broke out at Pont Arlier, a Town in Burgundy, which conſumed upwards of 300 Houſes, with all their Furniture and Proviſion; twenty Perſons alſo periſhed in the Flames. Above 600 Families are ruined by this Accident.

Vienna, Sept. 11. The laſt Letters from Conſtantinople dated the 18th of Auguſt laſt, which come from ſure enough Hands, contradict many Things, which are ſent abroad in the World, by the Party attach'd to the Ruſſians. Theſe laſt have repreſented the Crimée, a Country of great Importance, as entirely conquered, and where the Ruſſian Arms governed as abſolute Maſters: But the Letters we ſpeak of tell the Story as differently as poſſible; they tell us, that at the Approach of the Turks and Tartars Count Munich thought it adviſable to quit the Country, and abandon even Precop. The Ottoman Porte has ſhewn a general Joy on this Occaſion, and cauſed it to be publiſhed at Conſtantinople, to inſpire the People with other Sentiments than they had conceived of the former News. They ſay, moreover, that the Kaimacan had notify'd it to all the Foreign Miniſters, and moreover talk'd as if they had gained a great Victory over the Ruſſians. The People's Conſolation is likewiſe augmented by the Arrival of a Deputy from the new King of Perſia, altho', at the Departure of theſe Letters, the Propoſitions were not made publick, but it is very likely, ſay the ſame Letters, that the King will inſiſt ſtrongly on the Reſtitution of all that once belong'd to Perſia, and as rude a Shock as this may be to the Turks, it is thought they will lend an Ear to it, rather than abandon the Crimée to the Ruſſians. The Turkiſh Army under the Grand Viſier will be but on the Defenſive, and endeavour only to hinder the Ruſſians from extending themſelves alſo in Wallachia and Moldavia, where great Numbers of their Adherents may facilitate their Deſign, but then the Porte muſt ſuffer thoſe Ruſſians employed in Poland and in the Empire to penetrate wherever they pleaſe. The Grand Viſier will not hazard a decisive Battle.

London, Sept 25

There are Letters in Town from Marſeilles, dated the 14th Inſtant, N. S. by which we hear, that the Great Mogul (purſuant to a Convention lately made between him and the Grand Signior,) is in full March with an Army of 130,000 Men to attack on his Side, the new Sophy of Perſia, who appears very uneaſy on this Occaſion, and has ordered the Drums to beat through his whole Kingdom to make Levies, obliging all Men about 18, and who are ſingle, to take up Arms: This Enterprize of the Mogul is favoured by ſome Malecontents in the Eaſtern Part of Perſia, who have taken Arms to oblige Kouli Kan to lay down the Title of Sophy, which they ſay he has uſurped: They are well enough ſatisfied with his Government, but ſtill inſiſt, that the Title of Sophy be ſtill kept in the right Line.

They write from Peterſburg of Aug 20. That News was arriv'd from Counts de Munich and Lacey by Couriers coming from Poltowa and Kiovia, that it was reſolv'd in a Council of War, not to go and meet the Grand Vizier in Wallachia and Moldavia, but to attend him in a Camp better ſituated between the Dnieſter and the Pruth, and that the Prince of Heſſe Homburg had taken Care to ſecure the Grain 30 Miles round the Country for the Subſiſtance of our Troops.

From

From the Danube, Sept. 9. The first Column of Impressists that go from Italy into Hungary, is arriv'd in the lower Austria, pressing its March to repair as soon as possible, to the Camp of Frustack: The Ottoman Porte has accepted of the Mediation of the Emperor and the Maritime Powers; and they assure us that the Ministers of those Powers are gone to the Camp of the Grand Vizier with the Minister of Russia, and that some Conferences have been held for negociating an Accommodation, Baron Daiman has sent his Son fine Livries and a good Number of Servants, in order to make a fine Figure on account of this Mediation, and on which Occasion that Minister sends frequent Couriers to inform his Court Daily of what passes in Relation to the above mentioned Affairs.

From Paris of the 29th. The Princess of Conti finding herself attack'd with a malignant Fever and great Pains in going the 23d to St. Cloud, her Brother the Duke of Orleans Palace, came back immediately to Issy, where she had been some Days, her Royal Highness was blooded 5 Times in the Arm, and once in the Foot, without being relieved till the 25th, when she was brought to Bed in the 5th Month of her Pregnancy, of a Prince who just liv'd to Baptism, the Princess still continuing ill, receiv'd the Sacrament the same Day, and on the 26th towards 11 in the Morning, she dy'd at the Age of 20 Years and three Months, being born the 28th June 1716.—The Dutchess of Bourbon continues ill, having had her Breast cut for an Impostumation, occasion'd by the Congulation of her Milk, a Fever has follow'd the Operation, and now they are in Pain concerning another Impostumation in that Princess's Thigh, where the Matter seems to be gathering.

A particular Letter from Constantinople, takes Notice of the new Assurance they had that the Emperor was resolv'd to come to an open Rupture with the Porte, wherefore the Grand Signior judg'd it proper to prevent the Design of his Imperial Majesty, by first declaring War on his Side, which he has already done, if our Letters prove true. It is added, that the Appearances of an approaching Accommodation are the more flattering as the Peace is as much designed on the Part of Schach Nadit as it had been by his Highness; so that they do not doubt of its being shortly concluded, especially as this new Sophy was on the Entrance of a War with the Great Mogul to maintain himself on the Throne, the Indian Emperor taking Part with the presumptive Heir of the Persian Kingdom, who is his Grandson.

From Leghorn they write that King Theodore's Party was much reviv'd, by a Sum of Money that was sent him from thence, that two Vessels arrived at Alenia, and put several Foreign Officers ashore, to whom Employments were given, but that there was a Party of Malecontents, still separate from the Theodore who keeps the Mountains, headed by one Luke Ornani, a Gentleman of a good Family. However Theodore appears very vigilant, makes great Promises to his little Army, and omits no Opportunity to attack his Enemies, and gain'd several Advantages over them; twelve of his Prisoners he hang'd to ballance the Account of those the Genoese Commissary put to Death. Since these Letters from Leghorn, we have a very unfavourable Account wrote from Genoa of the 29th of last Month, O S which say, that Theodore is in a worse Situation than he has been since he began his Reign, by reason of a Miscarriage he met with a Design that he had formed against the Territory of Calenzana, wherein he lost a great many Men, and had much ado to save his Person. They add, that there's a general Consternation among the Rebels, and as general a Resolution to abandon him, and return to the Genoese Dominion; the rather, because they have heard with what Severity several of their Comrades, that were taken Prisoners, have been taken at Bastia.

From Edinburgh, That the late Affair of hanging Captain Porteous, it seems, has ended very quietly here, how far an Enquiry may agitate the Matter, we can't yet tell, but, it seems, by what they write, that they know very little of the Matter, for the Multitude that perform'd this notable Mischief came like Bays's Army in the Rehearsal, in a sort of Disguise, out of the Country, they knew not where, and took Possession of the City. Afterwards they march'd by Beat of Drum, seiz'd the Gates, disarm'd the Guards, and then went and took out the Prisoner, telling him in plain Terms, that they were going to carry him to the Place where he had shed so much Innocent Blood, and there to hang him for his Crimes. He made some Resistance, but it was in vain; they dragg'd him down stairs, and having set him on his Feet again, made him walk deliberately enough up the Lawn Market, and down the West Bow, to the Place designed for his Execution, where they halted some Time to deliberate in what Manner they should put him to Death, nay, they pretended to be scrupulous whether it would not be irregular without the Presence of a Magistrate, as if that Formality could give a Sanction to so notorious a Fact; however, they agreed to proceed without that Ceremody, lest any Accident should prevent the barbarous Execution, so they took a Coil of Rope from a Shop, tying one End about his Neck, they threw the other over a kind of a Sign-Post near the Place where the Gibbet is ordinarily set up, and haul'd him up; but he, tenacious of his last Moments, catch'd fast hold of the Rope with his Hands; upon which they let him down, and then hoisted him up again; but concluding that it would be too indecent a Sight to have his Face uncover'd, they lower'd him a second time, and as he had two Shirts on, they pull'd off one of them, and wrap'd it about his Head; then they hoisted him up for a third and last time, made fast the other End of the Rope, and there left him hanging from a little after Midnight till Four a clock in the Morning.

Yesterday Morning (Sept. 27.) her Majesty's most gracious Proclamation for discovering, &c. the Persons concern'd in the Murder of Capt. Porteous, with 200 l reward, was sent to Edinburgh, in order to be published there.

Sept. 28 A Spanish Man of War sailed the Beginning of this Month from Los Passages, having on board above 300 Soldiers, besides Officers, from Pampeluna; and, as they write from thence the 17th Instant, they were design'd for Buenos Ayres; and another Man of War, with a considerable Number of Soldiers and warlike Stores, is sailed from Corunna, and bound for St. Augustin: So that the Fear the English Colonies of Georgia and South-Carolina are in, is not without Foundation.
